Due date:_____

American Dream Individual Project

Context

You are an imaginative, creative, enlightened person who wants to share what you have learned about the American Dream's meaning, application, and impact on the American society, psyche, and relationships.

Objective

You have read a quality novel (the fiction choice) for pre-course reading that exemplifies people striving for the American Dream, sometimes struggling, sometimes failing, but mostly succeeding in their endeavors. Your goal is to express the American Dream through one of the following conversion options:

- A children's book with text and color images
- Twitter feed with emojis
- Scrapbook with images and text
- Email correspondence with "attached" or embedded images/photos
- Comic book with dialogue and thought bubbles
- Your idea — run it by me first.

Requirements

1. You must submit a physical product; it can't be something we view digitally. We will create a gallery walk so everyone can view all the projects. I will not accept a project emailed to me or in digital form.
2. You must fully, clearly, and effectively detail the American Dream's meaning, application, and impact on the American society, psyche, and relationships.
3. You are recreating the novel's plot, message, and characters in your chosen format, so you must stay true to the novel's essence.
4. You must include statements or character dialogue from the novel and cite these appropriately in MLA format. Remember that if it's already in quotation marks (ie. dialogue), then you use three quotation marks: "'I live the American Dream!'" (Author 24). You must also include a Works Cited.
5. You must display your name, the author's name, and the book title on your project's front.

Reminder

Score yourself using the rubric so that you ensure that you fulfill the requirements and expectations.
